coal strike brought the American blood of Lady Craven strongly to the surface. As a result, she and her mother, Mrs. Bradley Martin, are enjoying a warm house, while several of their English friends are suffering from the coal shortage.

When Lady Craven learned yesterday morning that her coal bins were empty, and that all efforts to secure coal from dealers were unavailing, she promptly rented several motor trucks, which she sent to her husband's collieries, near Coventry, more than 100 miles away. Early to-day she was greeted by the sight of the trucks returning with coal.

This incident also serves to reveal the seriousness of the situation which has grown out of the strike. The suffering has been increased tenfold owing to the intense coid.

Would Compel Production of Certain Records and Correspondence.

Washington, January 24.—A resolution by Senator Luke Lea, of Tennessee, introduced in the Senate late to-day, is designed to compel the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company to submit certain records and correspondence to investigation without making it necessary for the government to resort to court action.

By direction of the Senate, an inquiry into the ownership of certain subsidiary, lines was begun some time ago by the Interstate Commerce Commission and suspended when H. L. Stone, general counsel for the road, refused to produce certain records. The chief subjects of inquiry are alleged control of the Louisville and Nashville road by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and the control by the former of half a dozen other lines in the South.

The Lea resolution would provide for a special committee of five Senators to act with the Interstate Commerce Commission, thus invoking the powers of the Senate to compel the submission of evidence. Senator Lea introduced the resolution at the request of Chairman Clark, of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Young Prince of Wales Falls Violting to American Habit.

Ispecial Cable to The Times-Dispatch.]

London, January 24.—The young Prince of Wales, since he has been at Oxford, has failen a victim to the essentially American disease known as "the special train habit."

During the Christmas holidays, while the King and Queen were staying at Sandringham, the young prince ordered a special in order to get home in time to see his parents on Christmas Day, The Queen mother, however, heard of it, and notified the railroad company not to supply trains hereafter without confirmatory orders from either the King or Queen.

On Thursday the prince, after spending are evening with convivial friends at the Mariborough Club, ordered another special at midnight to get him to Oxford in time to keep a breakfast engagement with the dean of Magdalen. The railroad company, however, in accordance with instructions, telephoned to the royal residence at Windsor, with the result that the special took the prince of the latter place instead of to Oxford.

What took place there is a matter of conjecture, but it was a much subdued spring of royality who returned to Oxford this morning to apologize to the dean for having broken the engagement.

TRYING TO REACH COMPROMISE ON MONEY TAXATION

Emergency Clause Put Back by House Into Pending Bill.

20-CENT RATE ON $100 IS PROPOSED

Amendments Make New Law Apply to All Money Property, Whether in Bank, in Private Safes or Stockings, or Deposited in Other States.

While no final vote was reached, the House of Delegates yesterday moved steadily toward a compromise settlement of the question of tax on bank deposits. Amendments were adopted which go far toward carrying out the contention of Governor-Elect Stuart that property of this sort should not be made exempt from taxation, and also that the relief desired by the bankers of the State be granted in such form that it will be effective before February I, the annual taxing date. A point of difference on which no test vote has yet been taken is on the question of taxing deposits at their source, that is to say, having the banks pay on the total of their deposits and charge the amount pro rata to depositors.

It is conceded that if this is admitted, the State will reap larger re-turns from a very low rate than it formerly did, when only a small pro-portion of the money in bank was re-turned for taxation. Although bankers vigorously oppose this step as cal-culated to drive money from the State, idential nature of his bank account, it is preferable to having the Commis-sioner of Revenue or occasional grand juries empowered to examine the books dividuals have made proper returns.

Jordan Substitute Pending.

With the Jordan substitute, favored by Mr. Stuart, still pending, the House adjourned until to-morrow at 12, when the bill comes up as the first matter on the calendar, and will probably be disposed of along some of the lines of compromise already suggested. The reinsertion of the emergency clause, which had been stricken out on the preceding day, was taken to mean that whatever may be the final agreement as to the terms of the bill, prac-tically all parties are in accord with the idea that it should be made an emergency matter, and be on the stat-uto books as early this week as possible, to prevent withdrawals of money over the taxing period.

said Secretary Lane to-night, when informed that the Senate had passed the Alaska bill.

Weaver Proposes Compromise.

The House was opened with prayer led by Rev. J. B. Winn. After the preliminary exercises, the Weaver bill came up as unfinished business. Weaver, the patron of the bill, which, as reported by the House Finance Committee, made the rate of taxation on money 10 cents on $100 and segregated it to the State alone, forbidding the taxation of this form of property by countles or cities, said that he still firm in his conviction that there should be only a nominal tax on this "It is evident," he said, "that we cannot get all we want. But we will yield something rather than defeat legislation that all of us know to be right and proper. The opposition can-not pass a 25-cent rate by any such vote as will enable it to take effect at once. We admit that we cannot pass at 10-cent rate by anything like a four-fifths vote. So I propose that you join with us in a motion to reconsider the vote by which the emergency clause was stricken out, with a view of offering a 20-cent compromise, but comitting the plan of favation at the omitting the plan of taxation at the source. Mr. Oliver wanted the additional 10 Mr. Oliver wanted the additional 10 cents to go to the counties and cities. It was unfair, he held, to segregate a tax to the State alone, without giving the counties and cities some subject of taxation in return. It was held that that could not be done under the pendantial but it was agreed that the additional counties and cities again. ing bill, but it was agreed that the additional 10 cents could be specified as for the public free schools, to be apportioned to the counties and cities. Mr. Weaver said he did not care where

Hard to Keep Up With.

"If I had to keep up with the gentlemen who represent these bankers, I would not know where we stood," said Mr. Jordan. "First they said they wanted a 35-cent rate, and they published a pemphlet, giving reasons why that rate would bring about great prosperity for the banks. They sent men that rate would bring about great pros-perity for the banks. They sent men all over the State to advocate the 35-cent rate. Then we come down here and find them advocating a 2-cent rate. Then the bill comes in for a 10-cent cent, and now they jump to 20 cents, and each one, they say, is the abso-lutely fair and just rate.

"The 25-cent rate was not my position, or that of Governor-Elect Stuart. We wanted the 35-cent rate, as the bank-

the money went, so long as the mem-wanted the 35-cent rate, as the bank-ers asked in their circular, but we agreed to 25 cents as a compromise. Remember that this is not a reduction from 35 to 25 cents. It is a reduction 35 to 25 cents. It is a reduc-tion from $1.75 to 25, and in some places where the local tax rate is higher of more than that, since there is to be no local taxation under this plan. It is an absurdity to levy a 36-cent rate unless it is actually col-
